Pelicans at the Lake · Questions 1–6

Pelicans at the Lake

Australian pelicans live in lakes, rivers and estuaries. They are well suited to this place, but they still need food, water and shelter to survive. Conditions can change across the day and through the seasons, so safe resting places are important.

Their large bills with flexible pouches help them scoop fish from water. This adaptation makes everyday tasks easier and can also help them avoid danger. Young animals learn where to feed and shelter by following adults or responding to their surroundings.

They feed on fish and crustaceans. As they move through their habitat, they also become part of a larger food web that connects plants and animals. Changes to one part of this web can affect many other living things.

One challenge is fishing hooks. People can help by disposing of tackle safely, observing wildlife from a distance and leaving natural shelters undisturbed. Small, repeated actions can protect the habitat without preventing people from learning about it.

The Quiet Room at the Museum · Questions 13–18

The Quiet Room at the Museum

Sara was helping to tidy the local museum when sara noticed a carved wooden bird. It looked ordinary at first, but a tiny mark on its side seemed freshly scratched. Dust lay everywhere except beneath the object, as though it had recently been moved.

As soon as Sara picked it up, it made a soft call near one display case. Sara hesitated. The discovery was exciting, yet it might belong to someone else or be too delicate to handle alone. A hurried choice could damage both the object and the clues around it.

Instead of rushing ahead, Sara told the curator and checked the case label. Each new clue matched something already visible in the local museum, so the search became careful rather than wild. Sara paused after every step to record what had changed.

At last, the call came from a hidden sound recording in the base. Sara wrote a short note explaining where the object had been found and what had happened. The note included the order of the clues so another person could check the discovery.

By the end of the afternoon, the discovery had become part of the place's story. Sara was proud, not because the object was valuable, but because patience and careful thinking had protected it. The adults agreed that the object should stay with a clear label for future visitors.
