Swift Parrots · Questions 1–6

Swift Parrots

Swift parrots live in flowering forests. They are well suited to this place, but they still need food, water and shelter to survive. Conditions can change across the day and through the seasons, so safe resting places are important.

Their fast wings and brush-tipped tongues help them travel between nectar trees. This adaptation makes everyday tasks easier and can also help them avoid danger. Young animals learn where to feed and shelter by following adults or responding to their surroundings.

They feed on nectar and insects. As they move through their habitat, they also become part of a larger food web that connects plants and animals. Changes to one part of this web can affect many other living things.

One challenge is loss of flowering habitat. People can help by protecting mature food trees, observing wildlife from a distance and leaving natural shelters undisturbed. Small, repeated actions can protect the habitat without preventing people from learning about it.

The Ticket for Platform Zero · Questions 13–18

The Ticket for Platform Zero

Owen was helping to tidy the railway museum when Owen noticed an old train ticket. It looked ordinary at first, but a tiny mark on its side seemed freshly scratched. Dust lay everywhere except beneath the object, as though it had recently been moved.

As soon as Owen picked it up, the ticket named a platform that no longer existed. Owen hesitated. The discovery was exciting, yet it might belong to someone else or be too delicate to handle alone. A hurried choice could damage both the object and the clues around it.

Instead of rushing ahead, Owen asked a guide and searched an archived station map. Each new clue matched something already visible in the railway museum, so the search became careful rather than wild. Owen paused after every step to record what had changed.

At last, a painted platform sign was found behind a display wall. Owen wrote a short note explaining where the object had been found and what had happened. The note included the order of the clues so another person could check the discovery.

By the end of the afternoon, the discovery had become part of the place's story. Owen was proud, not because the object was valuable, but because patience and careful thinking had protected it. The adults agreed that the object should stay with a clear label for future visitors.
