Mountain Pygmy Possums · Questions 1–6

Mountain Pygmy Possums

Mountain pygmy possums live in rocky alpine slopes. They are well suited to this place, but they still need food, water and shelter to survive. Conditions can change across the day and through the seasons, so safe resting places are important.

Their thick fur and gripping feet help them move among cold rocks. This adaptation makes everyday tasks easier and can also help them avoid danger. Young animals learn where to feed and shelter by following adults or responding to their surroundings.

They feed on seeds, fruit and insects. As they move through their habitat, they also become part of a larger food web that connects plants and animals. Changes to one part of this web can affect many other living things.

One challenge is warmer winters. People can help by protecting alpine habitat, observing wildlife from a distance and leaving natural shelters undisturbed. Small, repeated actions can protect the habitat without preventing people from learning about it.

The Tiny Door in the Fence · Questions 13–18

The Tiny Door in the Fence

Ruby was helping to tidy the botanic garden when ruby noticed a painted key. It looked ordinary at first, but a tiny mark on its side seemed freshly scratched. Dust lay everywhere except beneath the object, as though it had recently been moved.

As soon as Ruby picked it up, a tiny door appeared between two fence posts. Ruby hesitated. The discovery was exciting, yet it might belong to someone else or be too delicate to handle alone. A hurried choice could damage both the object and the clues around it.

Instead of rushing ahead, Ruby used the key only after asking the gardener. Each new clue matched something already visible in the botanic garden, so the search became careful rather than wild. Ruby paused after every step to record what had changed.

At last, the door opened onto a model garden built by children long ago. Ruby wrote a short note explaining where the object had been found and what had happened. The note included the order of the clues so another person could check the discovery.

By the end of the afternoon, the discovery had become part of the place's story. Ruby was proud, not because the object was valuable, but because patience and careful thinking had protected it. The adults agreed that the object should stay with a clear label for future visitors.
