Why a small puck slows down · Questions 1–6

A force is a push or a pull. When a moving small puck touches a surface, friction acts in the opposite direction to its movement. Friction makes the small puck slow down. A smooth surface such as tile usually creates less friction than foam sheet. With very little friction, an object travels farther before stopping. The amount of friction also depends on how firmly two surfaces press together. Friction is useful too: it helps shoes grip the ground and bicycle brakes stop wheels. Without enough friction, people could slip and tyres could slide. Too much friction can be unhelpful because moving parts may heat up or wear away, so machines sometimes use oil to reduce it.

1 Why a small puck slows down: What makes the moving small puck slow down?

- A friction acting against its movement B gravity pulling it sideways
C light warming the surface D sound pushing it forward

2 Why a small puck slows down: What would most likely happen if there were very little friction?

- A The small puck would become heavier. B The small puck would change colour.
C The small puck would stop at once. D The small puck would travel farther before stopping.

3 Why a small puck slows down: Mark each statement True or False.

Statement	True	False
Friction can help bicycle brakes work.	☐	☐
Foam Sheet usually creates less friction than tile.	☐	☐
Friction acts against a moving object.	☐	☐

4 Why a small puck slows down: Which surface would probably let the object travel farthest?

- A a rubber mat B tile
C foam sheet D a thick towel

5 Why a small puck slows down: Which diagram shows the applied force and friction acting in opposite directions?

- A push → ← friction B push → friction →
C push ← friction ← D push ↓ friction ↓

6 Why a small puck slows down: Which pair of statements is correct?

- 1 The text explains how friction changes movement.
 2 The text gives examples of useful friction.
 3 The text tells a fictional adventure.
A 1 and 3 B 2 and 3
C 3 only D 1 and 2

Testing surfaces with a small puck · Questions 7–12

This experiment compares how far the same small puck travels across tile, paper and foam sheet. Use the same ramp each time.

1. Place the ramp at the marked height.
2. Put tile at the bottom of the ramp.
3. Release the small puck without pushing it.
4. Measure and record the distance travelled.
5. Repeat the trial 4 times for each surface, then compare the results.

7 Testing surfaces with a small puck: Number these steps from 1 to 4.

- ___ Put tile at the bottom of the ramp.
 ___ Measure and record the distance travelled.
 ___ Place the ramp at the marked height.
 ___ Release the small puck without pushing it.

8 Testing surfaces with a small puck: How many times is each surface tested?

- A 4 B 3
C 5 D 12

9 Testing surfaces with a small puck: What type of text is this?

- A a narrative B a book review
C a poem D a procedure

10 Testing surfaces with a small puck: Why are several surfaces tested?

- A to change the size of the object B to avoid measuring any result
C to compare how each surface affects the distance D to make the ramp taller each time

11 Testing surfaces with a small puck: Which material would be the best replacement for foam sheet?

- A polished plastic B a woollen mat
C a glass sheet D smooth foil

12 Testing surfaces with a small puck: Using both texts, where should the small puck travel the shortest distance?

- A foam sheet B tile
C in the air D on no surface

Hugo's guide to three kinds of fitness · Questions 13–18

During a health lesson at the station, Hugo's class learned that a sedentary person spends long periods sitting and moving very little. Regular activity helps the heart, muscles and joints. Aerobic activities such as swimming make the heart beat faster. Strength activities such as lifting light weights make muscles work against resistance. Flexibility activities such as yoga help joints move through a comfortable range. Each type has a different purpose, so doing only one type leaves out other benefits. Children can build activity into ordinary days by walking, playing active games and helping with safe physical jobs. Activity should suit the person's ability and surroundings. A balanced week includes all three kinds, water, sleep and time to rest.

- 13 Hugo's guide to three kinds of fitness: What does sedentary mean in this text?
A training for a race every day B moving safely in deep water
C stretching every muscle D spending much time sitting and moving very little
- 14 Hugo's guide to three kinds of fitness: Match each fitness type to its description.
aerobic ____ strength ____ flexibility ____
A helps joints move comfortably B makes the heart beat faster C makes muscles work against resistance

Review: Beneath the City · Questions 30–34

Beneath the City by Samir Khan

This information book contains surprising facts, labelled pictures and short explanations. Its chapters move from simple examples to less familiar ones. The opening chapter gives readers enough background to understand the later examples. The captions make the pictures easy to understand, and small fact boxes add details without interrupting the main explanation. The index is useful for finding a topic again. Some pages use words that younger readers may need to look up, and the final chapter feels too short. Even so, curious readers will probably return to the pictures and facts more than once. Rating: ★★☆☆☆

30 Review: Beneath the City: Who wrote the book being reviewed?

- A Sofia Jones B The reviewer
C Samir Khan D Hugo Lee

31 Review: Beneath the City: What is the main purpose of the review?

- A to teach a science experiment B to give information and an opinion about the book
C to retell every chapter D to sell equipment

32 Review: Beneath the City: Which two topics are not included in the book?

- ☐ surprising facts ☐ a recipe ☐ labelled pictures
☐ chapter headings ☐ a fictional diary ☐ short explanations

33 Review: Beneath the City: What criticism does the reviewer make?

- A The book has no pictures. B Every chapter repeats the same page.
C The title is missing. D Some words are difficult and the final chapter is too short.

34 Review: Beneath the City: What does the star rating show?

- A The book contains five chapters. B The reviewer read it five times.
C The reviewer gives the book 4 out of 5. D The book has five authors.

Hugo's story: The muddy clue · Questions 35–39

Hugo carried a heavy box into the station. A loose corner caught on the doorway, and three dusty folders slid onto the floor. While stacking them, Hugo noticed a painted badge beneath the lowest folder. It was labelled with Sofia's name. Hugo remembered seeing Sofia earlier, but could not remember which group had left first. Calling across the crowded room would only interrupt everyone. Hugo wanted to return it at once, but the crowded room made the search difficult. Instead of guessing, Hugo placed the object safely on the desk and asked the supervisor to check the visitor list. The supervisor found a contact note and sent a short message. Soon Sofia returned, relieved to see the missing object. The unpleasant job of moving the box had led to a welcome surprise.

35 Hugo's story: The muddy clue: Match each describing word to the noun it describes.

heavy ____ dusty ____ crowded ____

A room B box C folders

36 Hugo's story: The muddy clue: Number these events from 1 to 4.

- ____ The supervisor checked the visitor list.
- ____ The box caught on the doorway.
- ____ Sofia returned for the object.
- ____ Hugo found the painted badge.

37 Hugo's story: The muddy clue: Which word best describes Hugo?

- A careless B selfish
C impatient D responsible

38 Hugo's story: The muddy clue: Why was it difficult for Hugo to return the object immediately?

- A The supervisor refused to help. B The visitor list had been destroyed.
C The room was crowded and the owner was not easy to find. D The object was too large to lift.

39 Hugo's story: The muddy clue: Why is The muddy clue a suitable title?

- A The story is mainly about bad weather. B An inconvenient task leads to an unexpected discovery.
C The story explains how to build a box. D The characters compete in a race.

The toy that came to life
