Why a wooden disc slows down · Questions 1–6

A force is a push or a pull. When a moving wooden disc touches a surface, friction acts in the opposite direction to its movement. Friction makes the wooden disc slow down. A smooth surface such as plastic usually creates less friction than rough cloth. With very little friction, an object travels farther before stopping. The amount of friction also depends on how firmly two surfaces press together. Friction is useful too: it helps shoes grip the ground and bicycle brakes stop wheels. Without enough friction, people could slip and tyres could slide. Too much friction can be unhelpful because moving parts may heat up or wear away, so machines sometimes use oil to reduce it.

1 Why a wooden disc slows down: What makes the moving wooden disc slow down?

- A gravity pulling it sideways B light warming the surface
C sound pushing it forward D friction acting against its movement

2 Why a wooden disc slows down: What would most likely happen if there were very little friction?

- A The wooden disc would change colour. B The wooden disc would stop at once.
C The wooden disc would travel farther before stopping. D The wooden disc would become heavier.

3 Why a wooden disc slows down: Mark each statement True or False.

Statement	True	False
Friction can help bicycle brakes work.	☐	☐
Rough Cloth usually creates less friction than plastic.	☐	☐
Friction acts against a moving object.	☐	☐

4 Why a wooden disc slows down: Which surface would probably let the object travel farthest?

- A plastic B rough cloth
C a thick towel D a rubber mat

5 Why a wooden disc slows down: Which diagram shows the applied force and friction acting in opposite directions?

- A push → friction → B push ← friction ←
C push ↓ friction ↓ D push → ← friction

6 Why a wooden disc slows down: Which pair of statements is correct?

- 1 The text explains how friction changes movement.
 2 The text gives examples of useful friction.
 3 The text tells a fictional adventure.

- A 2 and 3 B 3 only
C 1 and 2 D 1 and 3

Testing surfaces with a wooden disc · Questions 7–12

This experiment compares how far the same wooden disc travels across plastic, paper and rough cloth. Use the same ramp each time.

1. Place the ramp at the marked height.
2. Put plastic at the bottom of the ramp.
3. Release the wooden disc without pushing it.
4. Measure and record the distance travelled.
5. Repeat the trial 5 times for each surface, then compare the results.

7 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: Number these steps from 1 to 4.

- ___ Put plastic at the bottom of the ramp.
 ___ Measure and record the distance travelled.
 ___ Place the ramp at the marked height.
 ___ Release the wooden disc without pushing it.

8 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: How many times is each surface tested?

- A 4 B 6
C 15 D 5

9 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: What type of text is this?

- A a book review B a poem
C a procedure D a narrative

10 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: Why are several surfaces tested?

- A to avoid measuring any result B to compare how each surface affects the distance
C to make the ramp taller each time D to change the size of the object

11 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: Which material would be the best replacement for rough cloth?

- A a woollen mat B a glass sheet
C smooth foil D polished plastic

12 Testing surfaces with a wooden disc: Using both texts, where should the wooden disc travel the shortest distance?

- A plastic B in the air
C on no surface D rough cloth

Sara's guide to three kinds of fitness · Questions 13–18

During a health lesson at the aquarium, Sara's class learned that a sedentary person spends long periods sitting and moving very little. Regular activity helps the heart, muscles and joints. Aerobic activities such as cycling make the heart beat faster. Strength activities such as push-ups make muscles work against resistance. Flexibility activities such as gentle bends help joints move through a comfortable range. Each type has a different purpose, so doing only one type leaves out other benefits. Children can build activity into ordinary days by walking, playing active games and helping with safe physical jobs. Activity should suit the person's ability and surroundings. A balanced week includes all three kinds, water, sleep and time to rest.

- 13 Sara's guide to three kinds of fitness: What does sedentary mean in this text?
A moving safely in deep water B stretching every muscle
C spending much time sitting and moving very little D training for a race every day

Review: Fantastic Fossils · Questions 30–34

Fantastic Fossils by Grace Young

This information book contains surprising facts, labelled pictures and short explanations. Its chapters move from simple examples to less familiar ones. The opening chapter gives readers enough background to understand the later examples. The captions make the pictures easy to understand, and small fact boxes add details without interrupting the main explanation. The index is useful for finding a topic again. Some pages use words that younger readers may need to look up, and the final chapter feels too short. Even so, curious readers will probably return to the pictures and facts more than once. Rating: ★★★★★

30 Review: Fantastic Fossils: Who wrote the book being reviewed?

- A The reviewer B Grace Young
C Sara Lee D Theo Jones

31 Review: Fantastic Fossils: What is the main purpose of the review?

- A to give information and an opinion about the book B to retell every chapter
C to sell equipment D to teach a science experiment

32 Review: Fantastic Fossils: Which two topics are not included in the book?

- ☐ surprising facts ☐ a recipe ☐ labelled pictures
☐ chapter headings ☐ a fictional diary ☐ short explanations

33 Review: Fantastic Fossils: What criticism does the reviewer make?

- A Every chapter repeats the same page. B The title is missing.
C Some words are difficult and the final chapter is too short. D The book has no pictures.

34 Review: Fantastic Fossils: What does the star rating show?

- A The reviewer read it five times. B The reviewer gives the book 5 out of 5.
C The book has five authors. D The book contains five chapters.

Sara's story: The unexpected parcel · Questions 35–39

Sara carried a heavy box into the aquarium. A loose corner caught on the doorway, and three dusty folders slid onto the floor. While stacking them, Sara noticed a small compass beneath the lowest folder. It was labelled with Theo's name. Sara remembered seeing Theo earlier, but could not remember which group had left first. Calling across the crowded room would only interrupt everyone. Sara wanted to return it at once, but the crowded room made the search difficult. Instead of guessing, Sara placed the object safely on the desk and asked the supervisor to check the visitor list. The supervisor found a contact note and sent a short message. Soon Theo returned, relieved to see the missing object. The unpleasant job of moving the box had led to a welcome surprise.

- 35 Sara's story: The unexpected parcel: Match each describing word to the noun it describes.

heavy ____ dusty ____ crowded ____

A room B box C folders

- 36 Sara's story: The unexpected parcel: Number these events from 1 to 4.
