Why a block slows down · Questions 1–6

A force is a push or a pull. When a moving block touches a surface, friction acts in the opposite direction to its movement. Friction makes the block slow down. A smooth surface such as smooth board usually creates less friction than sandpaper. With very little friction, an object travels farther before stopping. The amount of friction also depends on how firmly two surfaces press together. Friction is useful too: it helps shoes grip the ground and bicycle brakes stop wheels. Without enough friction, people could slip and tyres could slide. Too much friction can be unhelpful because moving parts may heat up or wear away, so machines sometimes use oil to reduce it.

1 Why a block slows down: What makes the moving block slow down?

- A friction acting against its movement B gravity pulling it sideways
C light warming the surface D sound pushing it forward

2 Why a block slows down: What would most likely happen if there were very little friction?

- A The block would become heavier. B The block would change colour.
C The block would stop at once. D The block would travel farther before stopping.

3 Why a block slows down: Mark each statement True or False.

Statement	True	False
Friction can help bicycle brakes work.	☐	☐
Sandpaper usually creates less friction than smooth board.	☐	☐
Friction acts against a moving object.	☐	☐

4 Why a block slows down: Which surface would probably let the object travel farthest?

- A a rubber mat B smooth board
C sandpaper D a thick towel

5 Why a block slows down: Which diagram shows the applied force and friction acting in opposite directions?

- A push → ← friction B push → friction →
C push ← friction ← D push ↓ friction ↓

6 Why a block slows down: Which pair of statements is correct?

- 1 The text explains how friction changes movement.
 2 The text gives examples of useful friction.
 3 The text tells a fictional adventure.

- A 1 and 3 B 2 and 3
C 3 only D 1 and 2

Testing surfaces with a block · Questions 7–12

This experiment compares how far the same block travels across smooth board, paper and sandpaper. Use the same ramp each time.

1. Place the ramp at the marked height.
2. Put smooth board at the bottom of the ramp.
3. Release the block without pushing it.
4. Measure and record the distance travelled.
5. Repeat the trial 5 times for each surface, then compare the results.

7 Testing surfaces with a block: Number these steps from 1 to 4.

- ___ Put smooth board at the bottom of the ramp.
 ___ Measure and record the distance travelled.
 ___ Place the ramp at the marked height.
 ___ Release the block without pushing it.

8 Testing surfaces with a block: How many times is each surface tested?

- A 5 B 4
C 6 D 15

9 Testing surfaces with a block: What type of text is this?

- A a narrative B a book review
C a poem D a procedure

10 Testing surfaces with a block: Why are several surfaces tested?

- A to change the size of the object B to avoid measuring any result
C to compare how each surface affects the distance D to make the ramp taller each time

11 Testing surfaces with a block: Which material would be the best replacement for sandpaper?

- A polished plastic B a woollen mat
C a glass sheet D smooth foil

12 Testing surfaces with a block: Using both texts, where should the block travel the shortest distance?

- A sandpaper B smooth board
C in the air D on no surface

Max's guide to three kinds of fitness · Questions 13–18

During a health lesson at the nursery, Max's class learned that a sedentary person spends long periods sitting and moving very little. Regular activity helps the heart, muscles and joints. Aerobic activities such as jogging make the heart beat faster. Strength activities such as climbing make muscles work against resistance. Flexibility activities such as stretching help joints move through a comfortable range. Each type has a different purpose, so doing only one type leaves out other benefits. Children can build activity into ordinary days by walking, playing active games and helping with safe physical jobs. Activity should suit the person's ability and surroundings. A balanced week includes all three kinds, water, sleep and time to rest.

13 Max's guide to three kinds of fitness: What does sedentary mean in this text?

- A training for a race every day B moving safely in deep water
C stretching every muscle D spending much time sitting and moving very little 14 Max's guide to three kinds of fitness: Match each fitness type to its description.

aerobic ____ strength ____ flexibility ____

- A helps joints move comfortably B makes the heart beat faster C makes muscles work against resistance

15 Max's guide to three kinds of fitness: Which activity is aerobic?

- A sitting quietly B jogging
C climbing D stretching

Review: Strange but True · Questions 30–34

Strange but True by Hana Scott

This information book contains surprising facts, labelled pictures and short explanations. Its chapters move from simple examples to less familiar ones. The opening chapter gives readers enough background to understand the later examples. The captions make the pictures easy to understand, and small fact boxes add details without interrupting the main explanation. The index is useful for finding a topic again. Some pages use words that younger readers may need to look up, and the final chapter feels too short. Even so, curious readers will probably return to the pictures and facts more than once. Rating: ★★★★★

30 Review: Strange but True: Who wrote the book being reviewed?

- A Will Jones B The reviewer
C Hana Scott D Max Lee

31 Review: Strange but True: What is the main purpose of the review?

- A to teach a science experiment B to give information and an opinion about the book
C to retell every chapter D to sell equipment

32 Review: Strange but True: Which two topics are not included in the book?

- ☐ surprising facts ☐ a recipe ☐ labelled pictures
☐ chapter headings ☐ a fictional diary ☐ short explanations

33 Review: Strange but True: What criticism does the reviewer make?

- A The book has no pictures. B Every chapter repeats the same page.
C The title is missing. D Some words are difficult and the final chapter is too short.

34 Review: Strange but True: What does the star rating show?

- A The book contains five chapters. B The reviewer read it five times.
C The reviewer gives the book 5 out of 5. D The book has five authors.

Max's story: The awkward discovery · Questions 35–39

Max carried a heavy box into the nursery. A loose corner caught on the doorway, and three dusty folders slid onto the floor. While stacking them, Max noticed a silver whistle beneath the lowest folder. It was labelled with Will's name. Max remembered seeing Will earlier, but could not remember which group had left first. Calling across the crowded room would only interrupt everyone. Max wanted to return it at once, but the crowded room made the search difficult. Instead of guessing, Max placed the object safely on the desk and asked the supervisor to check the visitor list. The supervisor found a contact note and sent a short message. Soon Will returned, relieved to see the missing object. The unpleasant job of moving the box had led to a welcome surprise.

35 Max's story: The awkward discovery: Match each describing word to the noun it describes.

heavy ____ dusty ____ crowded ____

A room B box C folders

36 Max's story: The awkward discovery: Number these events from 1 to 4.

- ____ The supervisor checked the visitor list.
- ____ The box caught on the doorway.
- ____ Will returned for the object.
- ____ Max found the silver whistle.

37 Max's story: The awkward discovery: Which word best describes Max?

- A careless B selfish
C impatient D responsible

38 Max's story: The awkward discovery: Why was it difficult for Max to return the object immediately?

- A The supervisor refused to help. B The visitor list had been destroyed.
C The room was crowded and the owner was not easy to find. D The object was too large to lift.

39 Max's story: The awkward discovery: Why is The awkward discovery a suitable title?

- A The story is mainly about bad weather. B An inconvenient task leads to an unexpected discovery.
C The story explains how to build a box. D The characters compete in a race.

The toy that came to life
