Why a small sled slows down · Questions 1–6

A force is a push or a pull. When a moving small sled touches a surface, friction acts in the opposite direction to its movement. Friction makes the small sled slow down. A smooth surface such as polished tile usually creates less friction than coarse fabric. With very little friction, an object travels farther before stopping. The amount of friction also depends on how firmly two surfaces press together. Friction is useful too: it helps shoes grip the ground and bicycle brakes stop wheels. Without enough friction, people could slip and tyres could slide. Too much friction can be unhelpful because moving parts may heat up or wear away, so machines sometimes use oil to reduce it.

1 Why a small sled slows down: What makes the moving small sled slow down?

- A friction acting against its movement B gravity pulling it sideways
C light warming the surface D sound pushing it forward

2 Why a small sled slows down: What would most likely happen if there were very little friction?

- A The small sled would become heavier. B The small sled would change colour.
C The small sled would stop at once. D The small sled would travel farther before stopping.

3 Why a small sled slows down: Mark each statement True or False.

Statement	True	False
Friction can help bicycle brakes work.	☐	☐
Coarse Fabric usually creates less friction than polished tile.	☐	☐
Friction acts against a moving object.	☐	☐

4 Why a small sled slows down: Which surface would probably let the object travel farthest?

- A a rubber mat B polished tile
C coarse fabric D a thick towel

5 Why a small sled slows down: Which diagram shows the applied force and friction acting in opposite directions?

- A push → ← friction B push → friction →
C push ← friction ← D push ↓ friction ↓

6 Why a small sled slows down: Which pair of statements is correct?

- 1 The text explains how friction changes movement.
 2 The text gives examples of useful friction.
 3 The text tells a fictional adventure.
A 1 and 3 B 2 and 3
C 3 only D 1 and 2

Testing surfaces with a small sled · Questions 7–12

This experiment compares how far the same small sled travels across polished tile, paper and coarse fabric. Use the same ramp each time.

1. Place the ramp at the marked height.
2. Put polished tile at the bottom of the ramp.
3. Release the small sled without pushing it.
4. Measure and record the distance travelled.
5. Repeat the trial 4 times for each surface, then compare the results.

7 Testing surfaces with a small sled: Number these steps from 1 to 4.

- ___ Put polished tile at the bottom of the ramp.
- ___ Measure and record the distance travelled.
- ___ Place the ramp at the marked height.
- ___ Release the small sled without pushing it.

8 Testing surfaces with a small sled: How many times is each surface tested?

- A 4 B 3
C 5 D 12

9 Testing surfaces with a small sled: What type of text is this?

- A a narrative B a book review
C a poem D a procedure

10 Testing surfaces with a small sled: Why are several surfaces tested?

- A to change the size of the object B to avoid measuring any result
C to compare how each surface affects the distance D to make the ramp taller each time

11 Testing surfaces with a small sled: Which material would be the best replacement for coarse fabric?

- A polished plastic B a woollen mat
C a glass sheet D smooth foil

12 Testing surfaces with a small sled: Using both texts, where should the small sled travel the shortest distance?

- A coarse fabric B polished tile
C in the air D on no surface

Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness · Questions 13–18

During a health lesson at the jetty, Leo's class learned that a sedentary person spends long periods sitting and moving very little. Regular activity helps the heart, muscles and joints. Aerobic activities such as skipping make the heart beat faster. Strength activities such as rowing make muscles work against resistance. Flexibility activities such as reaching exercises help joints move through a comfortable range. Each type has a different purpose, so doing only one type leaves out other benefits. Children can build activity into ordinary days by walking, playing active games and helping with safe physical jobs. Activity should suit the person's ability and surroundings. A balanced week includes all three kinds, water, sleep and time to rest.

- 13 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: What does sedentary mean in this text?
- A training for a race every day B moving safely in deep water
C stretching every muscle D spending much time sitting and moving very little

- 14 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: Match each fitness type to its description.
- aerobic ____ strength ____ flexibility ____
- A helps joints move comfortably B makes the heart beat faster C makes muscles work against resistance

- 15 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: Which activity is aerobic?
- A sitting quietly B skipping
C rowing D reaching exercises

- 16 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: Complete the sentence using two words from the box.
- A balanced week includes ____ activity and time to ____.

Word box: regular • rest • sedentary • resistance • range

- 17 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: Which statement is most likely true of a fit person?
- A They never need to rest. B They do only one kind of activity.
C They sit still for most of every day. D They can use heart, muscles and joints in different activities.

- 18 Leo's guide to three kinds of fitness: What is the main message of the text?
- A Rest should replace all exercise. B Muscles are the only part of fitness.
C Different kinds of activity help the body in different ways. D Only competitive sport improves fitness.

Review: Wild Weather · Questions 30–34Wild Weather by Daniel Frost

This information book contains surprising facts, labelled pictures and short explanations. Its chapters move from simple examples to less familiar ones. The opening chapter gives readers enough background to understand the later examples. The captions make the pictures easy to understand, and small fact boxes add details without interrupting the main explanation. The index is useful for finding a topic again. Some pages use words that younger readers may need to look up, and the final chapter feels too short. Even so, curious readers will probably return to the pictures and facts more than once. Rating: ★★★★★

30 Review: Wild Weather: Who wrote the book being reviewed?

- A Emma Jones B The reviewer
C Daniel Frost D Leo Lee

31 Review: Wild Weather: What is the main purpose of the review?

- A to teach a science experiment B to give information and an opinion about the book
C to retell every chapter D to sell equipment

32 Review: Wild Weather: Which two topics are not included in the book?

- ☐ surprising facts ☐ a recipe ☐ labelled pictures
☐ chapter headings ☐ a fictional diary ☐ short explanations

33 Review: Wild Weather: What criticism does the reviewer make?

- A The book has no pictures. B Every chapter repeats the same page.
C The title is missing. D Some words are difficult and the final chapter is too short.

34 Review: Wild Weather: What does the star rating show?

- A The book contains five chapters. B The reviewer read it five times.
C The reviewer gives the book 4 out of 5. D The book has five authors.

Leo's story: The missing label · Questions 35–39

Leo carried a heavy box into the jetty. A loose corner caught on the doorway, and three dusty folders slid onto the floor. While stacking them, Leo noticed a brass key beneath the lowest folder. It was labelled with Emma's name. Leo remembered seeing Emma earlier, but could not remember which group had left first. Calling across the crowded room would only interrupt everyone. Leo wanted to return it at once, but the crowded room made the search difficult. Instead of guessing, Leo placed the object safely on the desk and asked the supervisor to check the visitor list. The supervisor found a contact note and sent a short message. Soon Emma returned, relieved to see the missing object. The unpleasant job of moving the box had led to a welcome surprise.

35 Leo's story: The missing label: Match each describing word to the noun it describes.

heavy ____ dusty ____ crowded ____

A room B box C folders

36 Leo's story: The missing label: Number these events from 1 to 4.

____ The supervisor checked the visitor list.

____ The box caught on the doorway.

____ Emma returned for the object.

____ Leo found the brass key.

37 Leo's story: The missing label: Which word best describes Leo?

A careless B selfish

C impatient D responsible

38 Leo's story: The missing label: Why was it difficult for Leo to return the object immediately?

A The supervisor refused to help.

B The visitor list had been destroyed.

C The room was crowded and the owner was not easy to find. D The object was too large to lift.

39 Leo's story: The missing label: Why is The missing label a suitable title?

A The story is mainly about bad weather. B An inconvenient task leads to an unexpected discovery.

C The story explains how to build a box. D The characters compete in a race.

The toy that came to life

Write a narrative about a toy dinosaur that suddenly comes to life in a jetty.

Your story may be amusing or serious.

- What can the toy dinosaur do when it becomes alive?
